Bonn Seeks Accord on Berlin Before Talks on Troop Cuts

By Joho M. Goshko

BONN, May 21 (WP).-Chan-cellor Willy Brandt's government indicated today that it wants any negotiations on mutual East-West force reductions within Europe tied to a coltiuon of the Berlin

This West German attitude could lead to conflict with the United States, since the Nixon administration is under pressure for a quick response to a Soviet offer to begin talks on mutual and balanced force reductions. However, Mr. Brandt's official spokesman, Conrad Ahlers, said today that Bonn leans to the view that such talks "could not be independent of the negotia-tions over Berlin." His words were a direct con-tradiction of what U.S. officials have been saying about forcereduction negotiations during the past week. In that time, Washington has made plain its belief that force reduction negotiations can get under way independently of the four-power Berlin talks. In an apparent attempt to smooth over this conflict, Mr. Ahlers stressed that Bonn will not do anything to prejudice a joint stand by the member countries of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in replying to the Soviet But he said that NATO has not yet adopted a common position. Consultations by the NATO foreign ministers will take place in Lisbon on June 3 and 4.

Acquitted in Escape Case

WEST BERLIN, May 21 (Reuters).—Horst Mahler, lawyer, friend and defender of West Berlin's leftist youth was acquitted today of charges of abetting the escape of the political arsonist Andreas Baader here last year.

Two young women tried with bim, Ingrid Schubert, 25, a medical assistant, and Irene Goergens, 20, a student, were sentenced to six and four years in prison, respectively on charges of attempted murder.

They were found guilty of having participated in an operation to free Basder, during which a 62-year-old man was shot and seriously wounded.

There was uproar in the public gallery after Judge Friedrich Geus announced the verdicts and the police were called in to clear the courtroom.

Angry youths shouted 'Down ss justice," "Freedom for all political prisoners" and-to the judge-"We'll get you."

Miss Goergens repeatedly screamed "You pigs" at the court and the bearded lawyer said, "The times are past when you can throw a socialist in jail and get away with it."

Mr. Mahler, 35, rose to prominence by challenging West Gertrials involving rebellious leftist stuďents.

Despite his acquittal, he was not immediately freed as there is an arrest warrant against him in connection with a series of bank robberies believed to have been committed by an anarchist group. The anthorities say he and Baader had links with the group.

Explaining the court's findings, Judge Geus said that although the court believed Mr. Mahler knew of the plans to free Basder it had not been proved.

CAPE KENNEDY, Fig., May 21 (UFI).—Engineers worked on solving a new rocket problem to-day that will delay the second and last U.S. attempt to send the Mariner-9 television satellite toward Mars until late next week at the earliest.

The trouble that caused the

U.S. Again Seeks Latin Arms Sales

As Europeans Win Huge Contracts

By Leonard Greenwood RIO DE JANEIRO, May 21.— The United States is trying to move in on arms sales to Latin America that have netted Eu-ropean salesmen bundreds of millions of dollars during the past three years, but sources here are skeptical of the im-pact Washington can make.

Commenting on an appeal by President Nixon to Congress this week to double from $75 million $150 million the amount of U.S. military aid to Latin America, one American observer here "It's too little and it's too late."

He said Europeans, especially the British and French, bave already cleaned op with a hard sell in most of the bigger countries of Latin America with sales of planes, siups, submarines, sophisticated electronic equipment and even tanks. The United States has had a policy of deterring sales of arms to Latin America because it does not want to fuel an arms race which could soak up foreign aid and the hard-won fruits of local development.

Mr. Nixon asked not only for a doubling of military aid but also for legislation under which he could raise the figure annnally without returning to Congress each year.

Officially the request for the change of policy was because of the great accumulation of requests from Latin American countries wanting to modernize their military equipment. But it is also felt that the major reason for the request was to enable the United States to compete with European sales.

Observers here say the big opportunities for substantial sales of armament have gone for the next few years, however.

Standards of Technology

And, they add, by the time the next round of modernization comes, the rapidly rising standards of technology in some of the Latin American countries such as Brazil and Argentloa will make it possible for those countries to manufacture more of the items themselves.

In Brazil, the navy has ordered six British frigates of the Mark 10 class from Vosper-Thorneycroft, described as very modern vestels which will cost $40 million each. Delivery will begin in 1974.

Under present plans the hulls will be British, the five-inch guns will be American, the radars Italian and the fire control system Dutch. It has also ordered two British Oberon class submarines to be delivered in about two They will cost $30 million each.

Brazil is also buying four minesweepers from West Gerto U.S. design and is bullding a series of patrol craft based on the U.S. Coast Guard's 95foot design.

Brazil Buys Mirages

The Brazillan Air Force has ordered from France 16 Mirage lets in a package which will cost a total of 370 millon, including ground support equipment and radar. It has also ordered 112 Aero Macchi, Italian twin-jet trainer planes. It is understood that these will be built here in Brazil. The Italians will set up the production line and bring

This peckage will also cost $70 million. Brazil is also known to be considering buying planes for anti-submarine patrol. The Brazilian Army is buying national products for must of its needs including trucks and ieeps, rifles and ammunition. Its outlay for imported weaponry amounts to 835 million. Military and diplomatic sources here say Argentina has also ordered two British frigates and a scries of AMX-13 tacks from France. Argentina now has an assembly plant for producing the AMX-13. Argentina has also bought a number of Mirage-3 aircraft from France.

The latest wave of modern arms purchases began in 1968 when Peru signed a deal with France for Mirages. Peru and Chile have also bought France's AMX tank. C Los Angeles Times

U.S. Median Income in 1970 Failed to Rise

By William Chapman WASHINGTON, May 21 (WP). -When inflation is taken into account, the median income of American families failed to rise last year for the first time in nearly a decade.

The U.S. Census Bureau reported yesterday that in terms of constant dollars there was no change between 1969 and 1970 in the median income earned. . . The median income is regarded by statisticians as a key index measuring the changing prosperity levels of American families. It is the mid-point on the range of incomes earned, with equal number of families earning amounts above and below. Since 1961, the index had risen steadily, indicating that despite rising prices American families were earning enough to increase their net purchasing power, Net Loss Noted

But a Census Bureau survey taken in March and comparing incomes for 1970 and 1969 showed what appeared to be a net loss in the median income, as measured in constant dollars. In 1969, it was $9,990; in 1970 it was 29,867. Because of the possibility of sampling errors in the Census Bureau's survey, the figures mean that essentially, there was no

Analysts pointed to two factors accounting for the static nature of the two years' figures. The consumer price index rose sharply 1970 by 5.9 percent, making

Also, large layoffs in selected in-dustries—defense and aerospace cut down the number of persons who worked full time in 1970. The census survey showed that both white and Negro families fared equally-neither of them recorded an increase in median income in 1970. Census Bureau Director George Hay Brown said he believes this fact shows that, more and more, blacks and whites are affected equally by changes in economic

However, the Census Bureau, in another study of U.S. incomes recently, noted that in 1970 there were about 1.2 million more people living in poverty than in the

Pot Potency Varies, U.S. Tests Show

Federal-Funded Study Grows Own Marijuana

By Lawrence Altman NEW YORK, May 21 (NYT) .-Four researchers who tested marijuana cultivated from the largest legal pot garden in this country reported today that they had found a great variation up to 400-fold—in the content of the plant's natural chemical potency. The finding, one of the re-searchers said, could explain why some marijuana smokers get "turned on" while others do not and why scientists could arrive at different conclusions about the drug from similar experiments. Dr. Norman J. Doorenbos, Mrs. Patricia S. Fetterman, Dr. Maynard W. Quimby and Dr. Carlon E. Turner said they had grown marijuana in Mississippi since 1968 under a federal grant. The researchers are medical chemists at the school of pharmacy at the University of Masissippi.

From their analyses of the marijuana harvest, the researchers told a New York Academy of Sciences meeting that their find-ings had upset some popular ideas about marijuana.

Heredity Important

·Heredity is more important than environmental factors in determining the chemical content of harvested marijuana, Dr. Doorenbos said, "contrary to the widespread belief that warmer and sunnier climates produce the most potent marijuana." But his most potent marijuana." But his indings did not discount the possbility that environmental factors had played a role in selecting the strains of marijuana plants that had survived in various geo-

You can get potent marijuana under adverse agricultural con-ditions," Dr. Doorenbos sald. "It is a more complex plant species than people had expected."

Because the purity and content of marijuana can vary greatly. Dr. Doorenbos said in an interview, "it is understandable why there is lack of agreement about marijuana's" safety and actions.

Other Findings

Dr. Doorenbos said that his team also had found that: Both the male and female marijuana plants contain the active substance, tetrahidrocannabinol (THC), "contrary to the widespread belief that the active substance is found exclusively or largely in female plants." Individual plants within the various natural variants often differed considerably in chemical content. The active chemical part of marijuana produced from z Mexican strain ranged in content from 1.7 to 7.2 percent.

 Marijuana drug content varied in decreasing order from bracts to axil leaves to flowers to leaves to small stems. Just very low amounts were found in seeds and

The researchers said they were "amazed at the many morpholog-ical (structural) variations observed among plants produced by these seed types." They said that there were probably more than 100 species of the marijuans plant, known as cannabis sativa.

Diabetes Group Discontinues Use Of Leading Drug Commissioner Belin also played

WASHINGTON, May 21 (NYT). -A dozen university medical centers and clinics involved in long-term study of diabetes treatment have discontinued use of DEL one of the drugs or-dinarily prescribed for patients who do not require insulin.

The action by the University Group Diabetes Program follows by about a year similar action re-garding Tolbutamide, the most widely used of the oral disbetescontrol drugs. That action, which became known a year ago, has resulted in a controversy among doctors who treat diabetics.

The study group concluded that Tolbutamide was not benefiting patients in the study and that there were more deaths among its users than among those in the study being treated with restricted diet alone. .

Now the group has taken the same action with DBI that it took earlier with Tolbutamide. DBI, estimated to constitute about 15 to 20 percent of the oral diabetes drug market, is sold by USV Pharmaceutical Corp. The generic name of the drug is phenformin. A controversy is expected over this decision, too.

By Souren Melikian

PARIS, May 21-Comparing price trends in London and Paris is an iffy business. Ideally, the starting point would be two sales, held simultaneously in the two cities, of identical objects -an obvious impossibility. But, from time to time, sales come up offering the sorts of objects liked on both sides of the Channel; these suctions naturally invite comparisons, however speculative. Such a sale was the one conducted Monday by Antoine Ader at the Hotel Drouot. included 25 objects from ancient Egypt; a fairly large and varied assortment of terra-cottas; pottery and bronzes from all over the Mediterranean world, 2000 B.C. to A.D. 600; some Islamic objects; medieval and Renaissance bronzes; and several 17th-century objets d'art of great quality.

Of course, no London auctioneer would put so many different kinds of art in a single sale. Never would Sotheby's throw in a superb pair of Louis XIV andirons with Mycenagan pots. With that qualification, it may be said that all the objects the Ader sale fell into categories that appeal to British

The first 26 lots were Egyptian. Among them were widely different items: Fritted earth statuettes representing mummies of the kind called "washabti"; wood carvings; bronzes; and Coptic fabrics. The prices they fetched suggested that run-of-the-mill objects tend to be rather more expensive in Paris than in London but that the occasional good piece can be quite cheap here. The first inexpensive lot (No. 3) included a wood comb of the Patimid period, in very good condition. The lot made 150 francs. Of course, one might argue that a sale devoted primarily to early pre-Islamic art was the wrong place for this much later (10th to 12th century) object. But the next few lots confirmed the impression that fine objects, even when sold in their proper context, could go for very little money. A large washabti (19 centimeters high Lot 7) was knocked down at 343 francs to an agent of E. Borowski's, a desler in Basel and Paris specializing in art from the ancient world. Even finer was Lot 8, a delightful washabti of unquestionable authenticity, delicately carved: 501 francs. In London, it would have fetched at least twice that price. Wooden Harpy There were two other very good Egyptian lots. A superb wooden harpy of the Ptolemaic period sold for less than 400 francs. In my opinion, British collectors would normally pay from £100 to £150 for such a work i.e. three to five times what it brought in Paris In contrast to these low bids were the prices paid for some other, perfectly genuine, objects of no aesthetic interest whatever. Lots 12 and 13 included three small, badly battered washabtis and rose to 364 francs. No one in London would have wanted them.

When it came to Greek and Roman antiquities, the overpricing of third-rate lots - compared to what such pieces would normally make in London - was far more striking.

A tiny Mycensean cylix (12 centimeters) without decoration. drab and uninspiring, sold for 350 francs. A nasty little Cypriot horseman, perfectly shapeless with the less of the horse clumsily moulded, made 324 france_et lesst 50 percent above its London value. Another, even worse, rose to 440 francs. And three earthenware pots (Lot 36) whose only merit was to be undeniably 2,000 or more years old, were grossly overpriced at 81

After that came a very fine, little rhyton from Magna Graecia, from the 4th century BC, shaped as a woman's head. It was rather inexpensive at 928 francs. A fragmentary marble torso of the Roman period, cut off above thin shoulders and at the waist just above the navel, was probably expensive, by London standards, at 3,500 francs. It was decorative but not a collector's piece and not evocative enough to please the British buyer. The French connoisseur is perhaps more willing to use his imagination to reconstruct the missing parts and thus is the ideal customer for this sort of fragmentary work In contrast, a very beautiful, small marble torso, with a toga thrown over one shoulder (195 centimeters high) made only 1.160 francs

-a very reasonable price. The few Islamic pieces that followed closely on the Greek The Art Market antiquities showed that this category, which doesn't sell all that well in London, is somewhat more appreciated in Paris: Prices ranged from 320 to 417 francs for lots that are worth rather less in London (from, say, £15 to £20).

But the really striking differences in price made themselves felt when medieval, Repaissauce and 17th-century objects came up for sale. A magnificent bronze relief figure of a monk (14.5 centimeters high) in gilt bronze from Limoges-ho doubt once part of a casketmade 3,480 francs, rather less than what I would have expected it to make in London where the price would probably have been £300 to £350.

Dirt cheap at 1,318 france was a magnificent Renaissance bronze bell from Flanders, datable to the 16th century (Lot 74). It bad belonged to two famous collections: Maurice Lippmann's ond, later, Octave Pincot's. In addition, it bore two inscriptions, one in Latin, the other in old Flemish. establishing its provenance. This is a most destrable collector's piece and it could easily, in my opinion, have gone for twice the price in London. The other bargain in the sale was a pair of late 17th-century andirons each decorated with a finelychiseled bronze statue. They went for 2.320 francs, in spite of their princely quality.

There was one very good price however-45,000 france for a rare table clock (28 centimeters), signed by Guy Rumault, the Ab-beville clockmaker.

Even this one high price, however, would probably have been topped in London for an object from a similar period correspond-ing to British taste.

It is tempting to generalize and say that all quality objects probably sell better in London than in Paris. However, I am not quite sure that such is the case. Pirst, it seems to me, that, on the whole, French sales are above all characterized by more regular prices than British sales. An inexpensive objet d'art always appeals to some French amateur attending the auction, but British buyers will not even consider buying what they regard, rightly wrongly, as uninteresting, Hence, the higher prices for low-quality objects. Secondly, I think i French pay rather less tain categories than the for instance, antiques dieval ort, and rather decorative things, giving tive" its broadest mean instance, the French albeit unenthusiastically pieces of a type very 1

The Story of the Velazquez Sa.

There is simply no rational equating of the value of a work of art with a price arbitrarily arrived at by some accountants concerned only with rising British tax rates and the declining value of the U.S. dollar.'

By Emily Genauer

NEW YORK.—Who decides—and for what reasons—that a "priceless" work of art is worth a half-million dollars, or $3 million, or the record $5,544,000 that the Metropolitan Museum of Art announced last week it had paid for a portrait by Velazquez?

Art scholars? Museum directors? Dealers? The laws of supply and demand? Only partly. In the case of the Velazquez, the price was chiefly established by a couple of British accountants and tax lawyers. An ex-convict now back in jail for his part in the affair also had a decisive if minor role in a transaction in some ways as incredible as the wildest episode in a British crime movie,

The latest—and presumably the last—chapter in the story that began in 1650, when Veiszquez, in ne to buy art for his patron, the King of Spain, painted a portrait of his servant-apprentice, a young black artist called Juan de Pareja, starts in 1852. That summer Theodore Rousseau, then curator of paintings at the Metropolitan Museum and now its vice-director. Visited Longford, castle of the Earl of Radnor, just outside of Salisbury, England and saw the painting for the first time. It had, however, long been documented by art historians, and not the least fascinating episode in its history is its ownership by the beautiful Emms, Lady Hamilton, mistress of Lord Nelson but wife of Sir William Hamilton, British envoy to Naples, in whose collection it was inventoried when he left his post in that city in 1798. Back in New York, Roussean told the lats Fran-cis Taylor, then the Metropolitan's director, that the picture was so splendid the museum simply had to own it. The Met wasn't alone in wanting the work however. Since Velazouez had been named belonged to the king and the royal collections, and very few found their way into private hands, eventually to come on the market. But the old earl

In 1969 he died, and the castle was briefly untenanted before the new earl moved in. During that time a man, still unidentified in British court records and newspaper accounts, saw in a Salisbury pub an ex-convict he knew worked occasionally at the castle and offered him a large sum of money to steal from the unoccupied premises the Velazquez picture, which he carefully described. Where be planned to dispose of a work that well-known can only be guessed; possibly, like other important stolen pictures, it would disappear into a collection in South America.

The ex-convict not only agreed to the deal but decided to take other pictures in addition to the Velezquez, just so it would all be worthwhile. The lot was valued, says a story in the May 15, 1970, issue of the British newspaper Western Gazette, at almost £30,000. Only there was no Velazquez among the six pictures the thief had carefully wrapped in what the newspaper described as "lavatory paper." There was a fine Frans Hals, however, and it's possible he confused the two. It's an error even a knowledgeable crook working under less than ideal conditions might readily make, so closely related in their vigorous brushwork, their often limited black-gray-white palette, and their sense of living and immediate presence are the portraits of the 17th-century Dutch and Spanish masters. The thief was caught and convicted (he'll be out of jail in September), and the pictures Until now the new Barl of Radnor had elected, as had his father before him, and as British tax laws permit, to defer paying inheritance, estate and capital gains taxes until he disposed of his pictures. But the theft made him nervous, and he decided be'd better start selling.

At this point his accountants and tax lawyers enter the story. Taxes that would have been nominal for the old earl were not astronomical. It was decided that the earl, who, incidentally, owns most of the town of Folkestone, had to get between $ 2 1/2 and $3 million for his Velazque talthough a lesser but still fine Velacques portrait had been bought at auction by the Museum only four years earlier for 55 him to realize the same profit he w netted if he'd sold the picture imme-

Baumeister's work may have looked revolutionary in his own time, but what strikes one most today is his orderly, almost too orderly, workmanlike approa He was always an eclectic. The earlier oils are close to Schlemmer; others are similar to Ozenfant and Le Corbusier, rigid but still the most authentic: quietly severe and curvilinear semi-abstractions of still lifes. That his harmless methodical intelligence should have been considered Entartete Kunst by the Nazis seems doubly indicrous today. In his middle period, the forms scattered and became small and repetitive, snippets and moody exercises, always

Shaw's Insight Into Ireland

By John Walker

LONDON, May 21.-With admirable timing, the Mermaid Theatre has revived Georges Bernard Shaw's John Bull's Other Island," a comedy that is telling and pertinent as well as withy and passionate. It is a wonder, et a time when inferior Shaw can be seen expensively mounted, that London should not have seen a production of one of his best and most personal plays

The other island of the title is, of course, Ireland. Shaw promised the play to Lady Gregory and W.B. Yeats in 1904 for their newly founded Abbey Theatre, although, not surprisingly, it was not staged there. For Shaw's view of Ireland is harsh, tinged with regret for what might have een. His understanding of the underlying smugness of the English is no less acute. Time, indeed, has made his insights into the basic incompatibility and misunderstandings of the Trish and English seem more devastating.

Complex of Views

The play provides us with a mplex of views. There is Larry Doyle, played with great intensity by Edward Petherbridge, an expatriate who returns after 18 years to the small Irish village and the girl he left behind him. There is the English attitude, expressed by Thomas Broadbent (Christopher Benjamin in an absolute gem of a performance), who believes implicitly in his race's divine right to rule and sees Ireland as a green, wildly romantic stereotype, an aspect of his own character that he ruthlessly suppresses. And there are the Irish themselves, from the simple peasants to small farmers who have learned from oppression only to be oppressive to those beneath them and a beefy. bully of a priest, who uses God as the ultimate blackmail

Each limited attitude is exposed by the other. Thus Nora Reilly (another fine performance by Anna Cropper), who has waited in vain for Larry Doyle, is sharp enough to see that the English Broadbent is a fool, but is so bound by being a £40-a-year heiress that she cannot bring herself to shake hands with her poorer neighbors As someone says, The Irish are all right anywhere but in their own cour-

Mr. Nixon, the Senate, the World

Mr. Nixon won a crimped and costly vicsory in putting down the Senate's several challenges to his European troop policy-if "victory" is even the right word. Twentythree senators voted for the Mathias amendment, which "requested" the President to negotiate reductions within a NATO-Warsaw Pact context and also within NATO. And 36 other senators-with only one overlap, Mr. Inuuye-voted fur the Mansfield amendment, mandating a 50 percent cut in American forces by year's end. That means a full 58 senators registered one degree or another of opposition to the status quo. Moreover, there is every reason to believe that 35 senators (the 36 minus Inouye) who voted for the Mansfield amendment would have voted for the Mathias substitute, had it been left until last. But the 35 rejected the Mathias amendment which their votes would have carried, so that they could bring the Mansfield amendment to a final vote.

The more one ponders the proceedings, the more puzzling and dismaying it becomes that the President insisted on spurning the hand of that considerable company of thoughtful legislators who wanted to arm him, in any forthcoming negotiations, not with a command but with an entreaty which amounted to an expression of their support. Mr. Nixon's interest in insuring that the Senate did not legislate troop cuts in advance of negotiations was indisputable. His no less passionate determination to prevent senators from stating their agreement with his purposes was shortsighted and cavalier. What possible coup in terms of executive privilege or personal pride could justify the humiliation of one's senatorial friends? The very men. of course, whose votes will be required in other encounters to come.

True, the President has his free handbut he also has a warning that the Senate is not disposed to let things stand the way they are for very long. Doubtless once negotiations with the Warsaw Pact nations get under way, he will argue against any further Senate efforts to impose troop cuts, on the ground that such a move would undercut his negotiating stance. This has been the characteristic executive-Senate stalemate on Vietnam, one of grim tension and grudging movement and mutual bitterness. A similar stalemate may now be shaping up over Europe. To prevent it, Mr. Nixon will have to alter his tack sharply and decide to treat. the Senate as a responsible partner by keeping it informed, by consulting it, perhaps by bringing some of its members into negotiations. An impartial observer must confess, though, that the record of the past week's sledgehammer assault on the Senate offers scant assurance that Mr. Nixon is prepared to do what the success of his own policy

We can only hope that the European allies will look beyond the raw tallies into the substance of the Senate's deliberations. If tbey do, they will understand that America's days as patient patron of Europe are coming to an end. The Senate's plain message is that the United States will act responsibly, but it will act surely, to reduce the American super-presencs to which Europeans, to a fault, have become accustomed. The votes of 58 senators are the measure of this entirely justifiable senatorial state of mind.

Mr. Nixon will now be involved in three sets of enormously important and complicated East-West negotiations. The first concerns the status of the chief postwar great-power friction point, the city of Berlin. In the second the President will lead NATO into talks with the Warsaw Pact on mutual and balanced force reductions, or, as Moscow puts it, on "reduction of armed forces and armaments" in central Europe. And in the third, arching over the first two, Moscow and Washington are undertaking to limit their own strategic arms. Mr. Nixon's and the Kremlin's announcement Thursday that the two governments have agreed to concentrate this year on working out an ABM agreement, and also "on certain measures with respect to the limitation of offensive strategic weapons," represents at the least a triumph of calculated ambiguity. We intend to stody it before commenting further. as they say. For today, it is perhaps enough to note that the sense of diplumatic gears shifting, in both East and West, has never been so clear.

In this unfolding international drama, whose overall purpose is nothing less than to stabilize East-West relations at a lower order of cost and risk, it becomes all the more vital for the President to show appropriate respect in turn not only for the country's allies and adversaries but for those legislators at home on whose understanding and support the success of his foreign policy ultimately depends.

THE WASHINGTON POST.

Egypt's Vulnerable Strong Man

a Middle East peace settlement only thinly conceals the desperate need of Egypt's new strong man for an early breakthrough in stalled negotiations. Having gone out on a limb in his bid to make peace with Israel and having suppressed Communist-oriented hardliners within the shattered coalition that succeeded the late President Nasser, Mr. Sadat has to show some auccess soon in his effort to regain lost Egyptian territory through diplomatic means or lose the popular support that enabled him to triumph over his enemies.

It is unlikely that the Egyptian leader's terme are as rigid as they may at first appear. There is surely room for bargaining over the size and nature of the Egyptian force which Mr. Sadat insists must cross the Suez Canal as part of any interim settlement there. The Israelis already have indicated flexibility on this point. There may

President Anwar el-Sadat's tough talk on even be considerable leeway in the Egyptian demand for a "defined timetable" for Israeli withdrawal from Sinai, provided that Egypt's ultimate sovereignty is acknow-

> But Mr. Sadat made it clear that any agreement to reopen the canal can only be a step toward an overall settlement. This is not inconsistent with views expressed by Secretary Rogers during his recent Middle. East trip and earlier. It is not unreasonable if the Egyptians are prepared to agree to adequate safeguards for Israel's security at every stage.

> It is surely in the interest of the United States and of Israel to give every reasonable encouragement to the avowed peaceful intentions of this strong, but vulnerable, new Egyptian leader, whu has demonstrated his independence of the domestic and foreign influences that have perverted Egyptian diplomacy in the past.

International Opinion

Trials of Soviet Jews

It [the Soviet government] wants trials for their deterrent effect. But it does not want to be identified with a Stalinist revival or Nazi race excesses. It wants to present a facade of justice, but it permits only the Tass agency to report what goes on in the court, so that justice is not seen to be done. For that reason the genuineness of these trials is suspect.

-From the Daily Telegraph (London).

The Soviet government seems to think that it can achieve by legal manipulation what Mr. Ulbricht had to do with bricks and barbed wire. More trials of Jews who want to go to Israel are to come and they in their turn will no doubt be sent off to the labor camps. Their crime lies in making public their view that there are better places to live in than the Soviet Union and such heresy is met with instant repression. It is a monstrous injustice for them as individuals, but as martyrs they serve to make out their case to the world at large. -From The Guardian (London).

The French-British Talks

Mr. Heath: You have no mandate to promote British membership of the Common Market in Paris this week. By every test of opinion the British people are overwhelmingly against joining. If you stubbornly persist in pursuing your European obsession the Tory party will repent your folly for many years. Mr. Pompidou: Do not be misled. The British government has no electoral approval for joining the Common Market. Any agreement you may reach with Mr. Heath would be worthless. For what offends the British nation will be repudiated by the British people.

-From the Daily Express (London).

Nixon's Cautious Strategy

It is very difficult to get enough facts about what the two giant powers are doing in this field even to have an informed opinion about the substance and balance of the arms race, but one thing is fairly clear.

Nixon was confronted with troubling and even alarming cvidence of an intensive new Soviet missile and missile-launching program in Kazakhstan in Central Asia, and in the western areas of the Soviet Union, But nevertheless he decided that the risks of this energetic Soviet building program were not as great as the risks of abandoning SALT and launching a new missile crash program of his own.

What this will do to the world balance of power, with the Sovtet strategic missile program proceeding at a faster rate than the American, only the scientists and missile experts can tell But it helps put the President on the side of taking risks for peace, and this is a factor in the political balance of power, which last winter was swinging against

... A New Order

Aside from politics, Nixon would obviously like to preside over the creation of a new world order, and believes be sees an opportunity to do so in the last months of his first term. The withdrawal of American troops from Vletnam is proceeding on the President's own echeduie. China is beginning to take more friendly attitude toward the Western peoples, if not their governments. The Soviet Union is talking about mutual troop reductions in central Europe. The forces for peace in the Middle East are stronger now than they have been in many months, and that is not all.

West Germany, under great difficulties is experimenting with a policy of compromise with Moscow and Eastern Europe. Most important, Prance, troubled by the mounting economic power of West Germany, is taking a more receptive attitude toward bringing Britain into the European Economic Community.

Gestures Toward Peking

In short, there is movement in the world now, and some of Nixon's advisers think these are very deceptive movements designed to sweet-talk Washington into dangerous concessions. But the President seems less convinced by the risks of negotiation than he used to be, and is clearly willing to make limited concessions for a limited accommodation with both China and the U.S.S.R.

As in his personal intervention to proceed with the SALT talks with the Soviet Union, so he is known to have authorized influential travelers in China to indicate his willingness to ease the tensions with that country. Likewise, he has been taking the initiative for a compromise settlement between Israel and the Arab states and again, despite the doubts of some of his sd-Chancellor Willy Brandt to try for limited accommodations with the Warsaw Pact countries.

It will be a long time before the strategic consequences of all this are clear, but the political

He was widely prais-ed even by most of the Democratic presidential candidates for reaching agreement with the Russians on the agenda for the strategic arms talks, and even the pro-Israel congressmen are beginning to say that his efforts at mediation in the Middle East might eventually he useful.

So when the Attorney General says Nixon has passed through some low days but is starting up again politically, even Mitchell's critics would have to agree on the trend. A couple of months ago, the economy and foreign policy were both hurting him badly, but now the Republicans are talking about running on the old Democratic theme of "peace and prosperity,"

Foot-Dragging on Civil Right

Slow Bus to Dixie

By Rowland Evans and Robert Noval

WASHINGTON, - One day after the Supreme Court's unanimous decision approving school busing to eliminate the "last vestiges" of Southern school segregation, Attorney General John Mitchell amazed top offi-cials at the Department of Health Education and Welfere (HEW) by showing up at Secretary Elliot Richardson's executive staff meeting.

Mitchell's appearance was the signal that another major battle inside the Nixon administration has broken out over the volatile Southern school issue. In Richardson's office, the battle lines were quickly drawn. It was the old story of civil rights in the Nixon administration—a Supreme Court decision colliding with the Southern strategy, creating deadlock and inaction.

Mitchell listened quietly, puff-ing his pipe, while Richardson, HEW Under Secretary John G. Veneman, civil rights advis Martin Gerry, and other HEW officials discussed how to handle the surprising Supreme Court decision written by President Nixon's handpicked Chief Justice, Warren E Burger.

When he finally spoke, Mitchell strongly counseled a "goslow" approach. Mitchell put his Justice Department on a goslow course from the moment he took office, in line with the Nixon-Mitchell Southern strategy of evoiding political offense to the South.

Compliance Mandatory

Veneman then turned to Gerry, the No. 2 man in HEW's office civil rights, and asked how his office felt about a go-slow policy. Gerry, adroitly hitting Veneman's fat pitch, said that the court's decision seemed to leave little room for maneuver. HEW, he said, would have to renegotiate many desegregation plans and bring many Southern school districts into compliance with the high court's new ruling, But that is exactly what the Southern strategy will not permit. If HEW started renegotiating all the desegregation plans approved prior to the Supreme Court's busing decision, the result could be precisely the anti-Nixon political backlash that Mitchell and the White House have been so careful to avoid, Perhaps the best case of a. The Glory That Was While I would not dare to contend with Mr. Waverley Root in the illustrious field of cuisine, I do humbly question some of the statements in his article "Aqueduris of the Caesars" (IHT, May 13), The pre-eminent source of information on the ancient Ro- families occupied the man aqueducts is "De Aquis Urbis Romae" ("On the Aqueducts of Rome"), written by Sextus Julius. Frontinus sometime after AD 97 when he became Water Commissioner of Rome. Frentinus describes all of the aqueducts serving Rome in considerable-perhaps overwhelming -detail

Mr. Root says that two aqueducts ran underground-the Appia and the Anio Vetus or Old Ario. Frontinus says that the Appla had a length of 11,190 paces, 11,130 underground, while 60 paces were carried on substructures and, near the Porta Capena, on arches The Old Anio, he says, was 43,000 paces long, of which 42,779 paces were un-derground and 221 paces on above-ground substructures. The source of the Virgo was not in the Alban Hills, according to Frontinus, but on the Colla-tian Way (Via Collatina) at the eighth milestone. This is in the Roman Compagna in the direc-tion of Tivoli, some distance from the Alban Hills. Frontinus, incidentally, says that the water began to flow on June 9 in 19 BC. rainer than 21 BC, as Mr. Root says. Frontinus also gives the story of the finding of the spring. Mr. Root's source seems to have embellished the tale e bit. It is probably a misprint but the name is Marcus Vipsanius (no: Vispanius) Agrippa, who seems to have been aedile rather than censor at the time of the building of the Virgo aqueduct. The girl in question was more likely an Aequan rather than a Sabine, although she may have been Latin or a mixture of the iot. The com dole in ancient Rome is a vexed issue and, even today is still used as an ideoiogical club. In any event, according to Gaius Suctonius Tranquillus in "The Twelve Caesars," the people's clantor for wine grew out of a shortage that forced up prices. Suctonius indicates that the people were not seeking free wine but lower, more reasonable prices Finally, a tiny quibble. ## In U.S. Up .3% Last Month

Year-to-Year Change Smallest Since Mid '68

By Frank C. Porter WASHINGTON, May 21 (WP). - The government aunounced today that consumer prices last month rose 0.3 percent from March and 4.3 percent from a year ago—the smallest 12-month gain since August, 1968. The limited increase. encouraging in our fight to resist inflation," Labor Secretary James

Thus far in 1971 the Burean of Labor Statistics' consumer price index has risen at an an-nual rate of only 2.7 percent. This is actually below the percent range" the President's Council of Sconomic Advisers had set as a target for Mid-1972 in Matches Earlier Rises The April increase, which was also 0.3 percent after seasonal adjustment, matched that of the previous month. But many economists had braced for a steeper rise, believing that the more moderate increases that have prevailed since January were simply too good to lest. Last month's performance of the overall index was considered particularly encouraging in view of a sharp 0.7 percent climb in food prices, which tend to be volatile and erratic.

The greatly reduced rate of increase for consumer services, which had soared 8 percent last year, continued in April at 0.3 percent (2.4 percent annually). Much of the recent improvement in services has been due to the decline in mortgage interest rates. A 0.3 percent rise in non-food commodities was the same as in March and was held down by a further 2 percent drop in gasoline prices. On the other hand, it would have been less were it not for a 0.4 percent increase in apparel and a 28 percent jump in used cars. (The latter has risen 10.1 percent in the past year, suggesting that recession and inflation may have induced more Americans to turn from new to second-hand cars.)

Hourly Pay Up The moderate rise in prices last month was more than offset by pay, thus boosting the purchasing power of the nation's some 50 million private, non-farm payroll workers for the second straight month. There was no change in the average workweek.

the improving trend in consumer prices has become apparent. In the past six months, for example, the annual rate of increase, seasonally adjusted, was 3.6 percent while for the six months ending in April a year ago it was 6.7 percent.

The improvement has political implications, undercutting one of the Democrats' more emotional rallying cries for the 1972 cam-

Pennsy's Downward Plunge Levelling, Trustees Report

NEW YORK, May 21 (NYT) -Trustees of the bankrupt Penn Central Transportation Co. said resterday that things were no longer getting worse at the same rate as they were during all 1970. Reporting a $107.5 million loss for the first four months this year, the trustees said:

"It does appear that the disastrous 12-month downward plunge et a rate which got steadily worse all through last year has been stopped. The loss rate, so far as the railroad operations themselves are concerned, leveled out-in the first quarter and eased up a little in April."

For the three months to March 31, the railroad had a net loss of $92.54 million, compared with the $66.63 million deficit reported for the same quarter last year. The April loss was $15.09 million, com-pared with the loss of $19.18 million reported for the 1970 month. Penn Oentral went into trusteeship on June 21, 1970.

Two Interpretations The trustees said that the figures were "subject to two interpretations."

The first is that the Penn Central situation continues to be perilous, requiring urgent emergency measures; at the same time, these figures must be carefully evaluated, especially in comparative terms.

They pointed out that the figures on the quarter loss for 1970 had been affected by a $16.9 million credit taken on an intercompany transaction, and by S9.5 million in dividends paid by sub-sidiaries. The only comparable item in the first quarter this year was $22.62 million in dividends. Adjusting for last year's credits, the trustees said, "the net loss figures for the 1970 and 1971 periods are roughly comparable."

The net-loss figures for this year include charges for fixedinterest payments on debt, rentals, taxes and other charges. many of which are not being met because the railroad is in reoresnization.

Rail Operations

Volume eased to 12.09 million slures from the previous session's 13.34 million. Underscoring the cautious attitude now prevailing on Wall Street, a total of 70.8 million shares changed hands this week, marking the slowest volume of 1971 except for the 70.12 million shares in the opening week. The low volume and caution result from a variety of factors. These include the widely-held opinion that stock prices need a correction after the sharp November-to-May npswing, the recent climb in short-term in-terest rates and the apparent slackening of institutional buying.

Wet-Blanket Reports Also exerting a slight damper on prices were government reports that consumer prices contiqued to advance during April while new orders for durable

According to founder Roy Speer, the major clients will be banks, although he is developing a broker-dealer network around the world. He said regional ex-changes will be established in Hong Kong and Caracas. Mr. Speer said in a telephone interview at his home that all the money behind the exchange is his. He emphasized that no Gramco or IOS money would be involved and no Gramco or IOS people would be on the board of governors. Well Known' Names He said that four or five well-known" names are lined up to ioin the board, which will run the exchange, and that he has interviews set with "outstanding people" in New York. He told interviewer that so far he hae 140 broker-dealers lined up, including five in London, ready to join the exchange for fees ranging between $2,500 and $10,000. However, inquirles at the largest British and American securities houses in London and about the organization and unfamiliarity with the men assoclated with it. "I wish them luck," said an American dealer in London. But he and others said they were not convinced that there is a need for such an exchange. "I don't understand what it would offer that New York, London and Tokyo don't already," said another specialist.

Mr. Speer, who said he expects the operation to be profitable develops real estate. . within three to four years, insists that "we're not in competition with New York or London." The exchange would "avoid the problem of applying for listing in a number of central places" and allow companies in various countries to tap the international

He said there have been a num-ber of applications from companies about listing. This will cost, according to the company's literature, 0.01 percent of the applicant's net assets, or a minimum of $10,000. (At this rate it would cost a company like General Motors, whose assets total $14.17 billion, some $14 million to get listed. By comparison, it would cost GM about $50,000 to list on the Luxembourg Stock Exchange.) In addition, the applicant must have a minimum of $1 million in net assets and be a public com-pany with at least 200 share-holders and 100,600 shares pub-their own customers." The exchange, Mr. Speer said. will be registered in the Cayman Islands, a U.K. tax haven. British securities will not be quoted since this "would destroy my tax exemption," he said. As envisaged, profits generated by the exchange will not be subject to

U.K. corporate taxes. Mr. Speer said that John de Leszlo, a London-based financial consultant, "will do our financial analyses" of applicant com-

Mr. de Laszlo, who advises Bambros Bank, said he is waiting to find out what exactly Mr. Speer wants him to do. While Mr. Speer claims to have "an understanding" with Mr. de Laszlo, the latter says that "perhaps that is not quite the right

Mr. Speer, who said he is putting $1 million into the International Stock Exchange, estimated that the success of the operation would depend on the amount of confidence it could arouse in the marketplace. acknowledged, however, that he was not unaware that Robert Evans, an employee who is in Europe lining up broker dealers, was convicted of fraud by conspiring in the offer and sale of securities and was sentenced to 18 months in jail and fined $1,500 in Florida in 1967. Mr. Speer said he has known Mr. Evans for a number of years and thinks he is "a helinva guy." He said that Mr Evans's problems were the result of unfortimate circumstances. THE WHITE DAWN An Eskimo Saga By James Houston, Harcourt, Brace, Jovanovich, 275 Reviewed by Walter Clemons

THERE'S a true story behind "The White Dawn." In the spring of 1896, a small whaleboat was towed for away from the mother ship by a harpooned whale and wrecked on the shore of West Baffin Island in the Canadian Arctic, north of Hud-son Bay—where no white men had ever landed before. Three of the crew survived and were sheltered by hospitable Eskimos, who nursed them to health and welcomed them into their community. Yet when the whaling ship returned the following spring secking its lost crew members, no sign of them remained. What had happened? James Houston it a Canadian artist who spent 12 years among the Eskimos, nine of them as the first civil admin-istrator of West Baffin Island, and he's made a novel out of the accounts handed down by the Sikusalingmuit people that clarifles the mystery of their first, faral encounter with the white man 75 years ago.

Rouston loves the Sikusaling-muit: "They are clever sea hunters, splendid carvers and snowhouse huilders, masters of swift dog teams, dancers, singers, storydog teams, dancers, singers, story-tellers, warm family people who help each other and respect their neighbors." When three strangers are cast up on their shore, they overcome their terror of their pale eyes and incompre-hensible language ("spoken right from the front of their teeth. Their lips moved rapidly in a horrible way") and unquestioningly adopt them.

When the strangers try to teach the Eskimos to play ball, the lesson is a failure, though the Eskimos out of politeness try to be combative and fight the opposite team to reach the goal: "Sicwly," however, "the young people changed the game so that it would not be like fighting. The Eskimo women are sexually curious about the aliens and the unpossessive Eskimo men equably share their wives and daughters with their guests. Misunderstand-ing arises as a result of the visitors' possessiveness, not the hosts'.

The fault is not entirely on the white man's side. One of the best things in the book is the portrayal of the pride of the Eskimo chief, Sarkak, who sees control of his guests passing from his hand and withdraws from leadership of his camp. "Mixed with Sarkak's greatness was an unreasonable childishness, a fierce trasy lealousy," which his people had never seen until the special freumskances of the white men's circumstances of the white men's arrival disturbed the balance of their existence. The encounter between the two civilizations ends in shocking bloodshed, but it isn't a story of easily identifiable vil-lainy.

the White Dawn" has a powerful story to tell, but Houston has some trouble getting it told. I wish he hadn't cast it in the form of a novel. His first-person narrator, Avinga, is a crippled son of the Eskimo chieftain, who stands somewhat apart from the tribal life and may plausibly record details that a full participant would take for granted. And it helps, when we reach the end, to learn that Avings is an old man, recounting and preserving the vanished traditions of his people. But we has excuses and allowanc Houston isn't an ac enough novelist to he an entirely believable Avinga, It's hard to be Eskimo who begins hi any matter-of-fact re elist, When I awoke sound I heard was wind whispering and m Houston keeps apper Avinga's shoulder, and voice imparts informati the ventriloquist's c Avinga.

NEW YORK, May 21 (NYT) -Bobby Murcer made two decisions last winter: he would let his batting average get higher and his hair grow longer. Six weeks into the season, he has succeeded in doing both. He has the best average and the longest hair among all the Yan-kees. While the batting average is more important to the team's success, the hair is more intriguing in relation to the team's imege. In the past, of course-a past which consisted mostly of pennants and World Series champiouships the Yankees were considered to be the most prim and proper team in the majors. They were the epitome of baseball sophistication and dignity.

New that they're just another team, the Yankees don't lack sorhistication or dignity, but they have grown increasingly more attuned to the changing times. Off the field, their president, Michael Burke, has directed the change, Burke himself is a symbol of the change—a mod man with more hair then the past few club presidents put together. On the field, Murcer has beconic one of the few Yankees whose hair has met the pinstripes

There always seemed the chance that this time, at last, Ryun would kick, pass Liquori, and win.

Ryun was favored to win, and he was the favorite of the crowd. The world has watched Ryun develop from a coltish high-school prodigy into a long strider of graceful movements. He has always seemed very internal, long-

Tequila, Siestas Run 2d as Liquori Comes to El Paso

EL PASO, Texas, May 21 (AP). —Saturday afternoons in this hot, dusty border city usually are reserved for tequils and siestas. But Marty Liquori, a newcomer to the Southwest, will change all that—at least for tomorrow. Liquori, fresh from his mile victory over Jim Ryun last Sun-day in Philadelphia, arrived in El Paso yesterday evening and was met by more than 500 enthusiastic track fans. The Villanova ace heads an impressive field in tomorrow's : El Paso invitational track and field meet.

Testing Liquori will be a trio of sub-four-minute milers, including John Lawson of the Pacific Coast Track Club, who has a best of 3:59.1, Leonard Hilton of the University of Houston, a 3:59.5 miler, and Byron Dyce of the United Athletic Association quickly, the powerful thrusting of New York, who has also gone men usually finish in a bunch of New York, who has also gone 3:59.5.

His style of running was classical, too, letting others set the pace, burn themselves out, passing them with a closing kick that suggested his well of strength was unfathomable. This turned out to be untrue, of course. He suffered mononucleosis, he finished second in Mexico City, he lost to Liquori in a champion-ship race two years ago, then, in the middle of another race a few months later, walked off the track, disgusted, dejected, sick of the pressure and demands. He did not run again competitive:7

until early this year. The Great Return

While he was gone, Liquori, brash, glib, cocky, extroverted, an exciting runner of obvious joys, became the country's top miler. Sunday's mile was not Ryun'e first since dropping out in June, 1969, but because Liquori and the East Coast media were waiting in Philadelphia, it became The Great Return. And for Liquori, whose No. 1 ranking seemed by default, it was The Great Test.

There was another element, too: Just as some of Muhammad All's fights, and the Super Bowl game featuring Joe Namath and Johnny Unites were given paint jobs of right vs. evil, or at least right vs. left, so was Ryun-Liquori somehow mixed up with a supposed juxtaposition of middle-American decency and Eastern urban slyness. The labels all seem pretty silly especially since there are people who would take, for example, Joe Frazier's support of Phila-delphia mayoral candidate Frank Rizzo, or the adultery charges against Johnny Unitas, or Ryun's 'quitting" to further confus goods and the bads. But there was nothing silly about the drams of the match-up. Boxers are judged and quarterbacks never really confront each other. But milers are doing something basic and simple, and if the naked eye misses a beat at the finish the clock and the camera usually do not.

Perfect Climax

The mile lasts only about 4 minutes a sports fan's perfect climax. The dashes are over too The marathon is too long, enough

Hill, at 41 the senior grandprix driver, has been in every Monaco race since '58 and it took him until 1963 to finally win one. From 1963 to 1970, he won five times, had a second, a third, and last year—the year after he was "finished"—came in fifth in a Lotus.

It was a nice sene finish for Watkins Glen Grand Prix in 1969 and was supposedly too old to try a comeback. When he began racing again, everyone was sure that Hill would take it easy and just try to finish races. But who would care? It was class just to have him around.

Earlier this year. Hill won a Formula Two race and then won in Formula One and it makes no difference that Hill's logs appear to be a little bowed when he walks. He, as before, will be one of the drivers to follow Sunday.

"Monte is proper road racing which is what auto racing is all about," he said. "I really enjoy Oh, you can't say I love it. Love tt, no. Love's a pretty strong word, you know. Like it,

Thing of Beauty, Joy for About 4 Minutes

But the mile builds, lap by lap, until the cheers become a single scream, held to the wire. There are sports, like football, which seem more enjoyable for the fan than the player, and like baseball, which seem more enjoyable for the player. But the pains and pleasures of the mile, at least for those 4 minutes. seem to be shared. Even as the cheers rise and lengthen, the runners below seem to stretch down into that well of strength and courage and will they have dug in a thousand practice runs. The fastest ones win, and the best ones find out how wide and deep they are. There was that sense of testing in the mile run last Sunday. and the feeling that the victory was not so important as the beauty of the race, and the pro-

The Inventions Of Albrecht Dürer

"And this gift is miraculous. For God often gives the ability to learn and the insight to make something good to one man, the like of whom nobody is found in his own days. and nobody has lived before him for a long time, and nobody comes ofter him very soon ... "

By Paul Richard

WASHINGTON (WP).-The German artist Albrecht Dürer, who wrote those words, knew that he was such a man. Though two towering figures flank—and overshadow—him, Dürer merits comparison with the most "miraculous" of masters. When he was born, in Nuremberg, to a Hungarian goldsmith, on May 21, 1471. Leonardo was 18. Dürer died in 1528, 78 years be-the birth of Rembrandt. Dürer was an artist of unquenchable curiosity who, like Leonardo, was interested in everything—bats and pige and the muscles of the horse, the look of light on moving water, military fortifications and all varieties of arms, the decaying of old barns, the leaves of tiny plants. With meticulous accuracy he recorded all the smallest bits of real world around him. But the actual could not confine him. For Dürer loved the monstrous. It was on an excursion to Zeeland-to see a stranded whale-that he first suffered an attack of the "strange disease" from which he died. Horrible things, with fangs and many heads and wings and ciaws, populate his woodcuts for the "Apocalypse." He was 27 when that remarkable book was published in 1498. It made him famous throughout Europe. And it changed the history of art. Dürer's "invention" of the woodcut did for printed illustrations what Gutenherg's movable type, invented half a century before, had done for printed words.

Woodcuts in the past had been made by carpenters. With the publication of the "Apocalypse," that old crude craft was suddenly transformed into a subtle and sophisticated art. Dürer's contributions to the old art of engraving were equally important.

The two techniques are diametrically opposed. In woodcutting the whites are cut sway and the ridges that remain receive the ink. In engraving the opposite is true. The ink is held in shallow grooves cut into B metal plate.

Other artists-particularly Martin Schongauer, with whom Dürer. as a young man, had tried unsuccessfully to study-had earlier produced engravings of great beauty. But Durer's reveal B silvery delicacy, a control of light and shade and texture, that had never been approached.

Through Dürer, the graphic orts of Europe had taken a quantum jump. Before he had turned 30, he had re-invented both the woodcut and engraving-much as Rembrandt was to suddenly reveal the potential of the etching, yet another art of mass production, in the century to come, Dürer had imagined the angelic and the monstrous, he had ereated new techniques, yet all of his inventiveness falled to preserve him from a nagging dissatisfection that bordered on despair. For Dürer sought a beauty that was absolute. Dürer sought the perfect. All his subtlety and skill, his intuition and invention. coold not satisfy his mind, for he felt as if these things were huilt on shifting sands. He yearned for something solid. He longed to place beneath his art the clarity of mathematics and the certainty of science. . He thought it could be done-and he had reason to believe so. When he re-invented the woodcut and the etching, he saw his art improve. Then he went to Italy and learned another "secret art" and it improved still more.

In Italy he mastered the science of perspective. In his great "St. Eustece," that remarkable engraving of 1500-01, the illusion is imperfect. Like characters in a Disney film, the figures in "St. Eustace" float uncomfortably on separate receding planes. Later. having mastered the "secret of art perspective," he learned to place his figures in an ordered and harmonious measurable space.

He longed to build his art on geometry and numbers, "If thou liest not right foundation." Dürer wrote, "It is impossible for thee to make something correct and good even though thou mayst have the greatest practice and freedom of hand in the world,"

He believed with Leonardo that "those who are enamored of practice without science are like sailors who board a ship without rudder and compass, never having any certainty as to whither they go."

Leonardo's "science," his incomparable intellect, somehow managed to enrich every aspect of his art. Dilrer was far less successful. It is for this reason that the great art historian Erwin Panofsky believed that "Melancholia I," the engraving of 1514, "is in a sense a spiritual self-portrait of Albrecht Dürer.'

Two hundred and seven Dürer prints, in an exhibition called "Dürer in America: His Graphic Work," are on view at the National Gallery until July 5.
